TWO FIRE ALARMS PULLED MONDAY

SCORCHES AT BELL FOUNDRY AND COHEN'S STORE.

Prompt Action at Both Places Saved Serious Loss.

It is not often that business in Northville will afford two fires in one day, but Monday started in fine shape and only by prompt action on the part of those present was a serious loss averted.

About two o'clock an alarm came in from the Bell Foundry company's shops, where a quantity of shellac had caught fire from a spark from one of the forges in the finishing room of the bell department. It blazed and smoked like a "house afire" and then the boys began to give it sand from the moulding room. They threw it on in scoops, in buckets, pails, paddles and spoons, hands full and hats full—any old way and every old way—and finally the fire gave up in disgust just as the fire department arrived on the scene. The damage was very slight.

At Cohen's store the illumination commenced at five o'clock and for a little while the east show window was never before dressed in a manner to attract so much attention. Some of the draperies caught fire from the gas jet and while it lasted there was more excitement than at a circus. The window was filled with suits, hats, overcoats and other furnishings and things went off like smoke for fifteen minutes. Fortunately there was a water tap near the window and with a couple of water pails handy it was not hard for Mr. Cohen and the clerks to successfully fight the conflagration and keep the fire confined to the window, though the flames did get over into the shoe boxes on that side of the store and it also scorched the ceiling over head near the window. About $300 worth of goods were in the window and they were all destroyed. The damage to both store and goods is covered by insurance.

FUNERAL OF LUTHER LAPHAM

Held from the Home Here Last Monday.

The funeral services over the remains of Luther Lapham, whose death was briefly announced in last week's record, were held on Monday of this week from the late home, Rev. Reed Stuart of Detroit officiating.

Mr. Lapham was born December 2, 1816, at Macedon, Wayne Co., N. Y., and came west when he 11 years old with his parents. All the hardships of the pioneer were endured and his education was limited to the old log school house. In 1838 he married Deborah B. Lapham, and had eight children, six living to maturity. Mr. Lapham resided in Farmington until 1878, when he retired from active life and moved to Northville. His first wife died May 26, 1876, and on February 21, 1877, he was married to Maria B. Peck of Mundy, Genesee county, who has cared for him in his last days.

Birthday Party.

You are all cordially invited to attend your own birthday party to be held in Princess rink Tuesday, February 25th.

You will be introduced to George and Martha Washington, Cupid, St. Patrick, Shakespeare, Queen Victoria, George III, Uncle Sam, Napoleon, Frances E. Willard, Booker T. Washington, Sam Houston, Alice, Mary Queen of Scots. There will also be 24 young ladies dressed to represent the different months of the year.

There will be an interesting program consisting of recitations, vocal and instrumental music, including solos by Mrs. B. R. Long, songs by the Male Quartette and music by the Northville Cornet band.

An excellent supper consisting of roast beef, creamed potatoes, brown gravy, salads, pickles, cake and coffee will be served from 5 to 8 o'clock.

Fifteen cents will admit you to the supper and entertainment, while 10 cents will admit you to the entertainment alone.

THE BAPTIST SOCIETY.

THE SUGAR BEET MEETING.

Good Sized Attendance Present Yesterday P. M.

There were about 200 farmers and business men out to the sugar beet meeting yesterday afternoon and they listened to some interesting talk by Practical Farmers Yearlies of Pontiac and Gilbert of Lansing. They told the farmers how they could raise beets for profit and also explained the value of the by-product. They said that in their estimation the soil hereabouts was particularly well adapted for the purpose.

GAVE HIS LEG TO SAVE HIS LIFE

SERGT. FRANK LEWIS UNDERWENT THE ORDEAL MONDAY.

Tropical Ulcers Contracted in the Philippines Did It.

As a result of tropical ulcers contracted while serving his country in the Philippines during 1899 and 1900, Frank Lewis of this place has been obliged to suffer the amputation of his left leg just below the knee. The operation was performed on Monday by Dr. T. B. Henry, assisted by Drs. Murdoch and Turner of Northville and Dr. Henry of South Lyon. Dr. Webber of St. Mary's hospital, an ex-army surgeon, was called for consultation last week and agreed with Dr. Henry that the removal of the limb was necessary to save Frank's life. It was a very successful amputation.

SERGT. FRANK LEWIS Whose leg was amputated Monday as a result of disease contracted while in the Philippines.

tation and he is exceptionally comfortable now considering the circumstances.

These ulcer affections were quite common among the soldiers and as a result of them many of the boys died or lost their limbs. The spot afflicted is very insignificant at first and causes no trouble for some time. On Frank's leg at first it was no larger than his thumb nail and not until well toward the end of the service did it cause him any annoyance to speak of. Since coming home it has grown larger and larger until at the time of the operation it was as large as a man's hand and it had affected his system so much that for some time past he has undergone much suffering.

Those who are posted on the disease say that if left to itself it soon gets into the system and causes an incurable affection of tuberculosis. It is sort of an affection due to the peculiar climate there and is augmented by the hardships incidental to army life.

Lewis saw some real service in the Philippines and he was twice wounded, once on the left hand and once by being shot through the leg, but this wound was not the cause of ulcers.

Lewis enlisted in Co. H, 33rd U. S. V., a company organized at San Antonio, Texas, Aug. 14, 1899. With his regiment he arrived in the Philippines October 27th of the same year. He participated in every battle and engagement with his company and was rapidly promoted from corporal to first duty sergeant. He participated in the battle of San Jacinto on Nov. 11th, just 20 days after his arrival.

All the healing balsamic virtues of the Norway pine are concentrated in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Nature's own remedy for coughs and rival on the foreign shore. He was also in the battle of Tildad Pass on Dec. 2 and at Vigan Dec. 4. Besides those battles he was in ten other engagements and went with his company in Gen. Wheaton's northern expedition; also the expedition Leganto and Bontoc as well as with Gen. Young's brigade into N. W. Luzon. He was mustered out with his company at San Francisco on March 29th of last year.

Frank has a good war record and it is to be presumed that Uncle Sam will so far as possible recompense him for the loss of a limb given in defense of his country. Frank is full of pluck yet and says he would do the same thing over again, leg or no leg. He enlisted in the Cuban war and came near dying in one of the field hospitals in the south, but that didn't dampen his patriotic ardor at all and no sooner was his company mustered out than he was off for the Philippines as soon after the call for volunteers there was issued as his health would permit.

HE WAS ONCE A GREAT HORSE

RATTENBURY'S GRAY FRED THAT DIED LAST WEEK.

At One Time He Was Entered at the M. & M. Detroit Races.

"Gray Fred," George Ruttenbury's fast trotter that died last week, was once a great horse, and even up to the time of his death he could go at a lively clip. A few years ago he was entered in the M. & M. Blue Ribbon races at Detroit, probably the only Michigan horse ever having that honor. Concerning his death the Ann Arbor Courier of last week said:

"Gray Fred, the well known trotter, is dead. He was brought from Northville and was taken sick Monday evening and placed in a barn 12 miles east of the city. The news came to the city yesterday morning that he was dead."

"Gray Fred was nine years old. He was raised in Detroit by the well known showman, Franch. Six years ago he was purchased by Fred H. Lepper, the landlord of the Cook House. Last summer he was sold to 'Tommy' McNamara of Chelsea, who traded him to a hotelkeeper (Geo. Rattenbury) at Northville. Mr. McNamara again traded to get him back and he died on his way to be delivered."

"The best time he made was 2:24 1/2 in '98 on the track at Adrian. Mr. Lepper often drove him a quarter in 32 seconds. He had the distemper three years ago and never seemed to be right after that."

Wm. Fisher will have an auction sale on his farm one mile west of Novi on Friday, March 7th. A lot of horses, cows, hogs, machinery, feed, farm implements, etc., will be offered for sale.

James Dunham will have an auction sale of a number of horses including a big bay team eight years old and weighing 2,800 pounds, cows, hogs, hens, grain, fodder, farm implements, tools, etc., on the George Dennis farm, two miles north of Northville, on Tuesday, Feb. 25th, commencing at 10 o'clock, with lunch at noon.

WINDMILLS IN THE WEST

Important Part They Play on the Great Farms of the Plains.

"A thing that strikes an eastern man strangely," said the man just back from a western trip, "is the prevalence of the windmill in the west. This is supposed to be the age of steam and electricity, of new ideas in every line of human activity, but you would be inclined to change your mind if you ever saw the forests of primitive windmills that dot the western plains. They first come into view when the traveler crosses the Mississippi into Iowa, and by the time he gets to Nebraska and Kansas they seem to be staring in the car windows at every revolution of the wheels. And they are the most useful adjunct the western farmer possesses. Usually a man associates the windmill with Holland, but the western variety is a different brand and used for exactly the opposite purpose that Hollanders employ them for. In that country the mill is used to get rid of the water; in the west it is employed to produce it. The enterprising manufacturers make them in all styles, some tall and graceful, others low with a half circle of fans at the top. The big ones are useful in grinding corn, but most of them are engaged in pumping up water for irrigation and to slake the thirst of the cattle, horses and hogs. For the latter a system of pipes conveys the water to various parts of the ranch. The wells reach way down into the earth, where an exhaustless supply is found, and while few furnish the source of any extended irrigation systems, nearly all have connections with the garden and yard. The small streams which abound in the west generally become stagnant during the summer but with the sandpoint and the wind pump the great reservoir of nature is tapped and great streams of water are furnished. Many ranchmen have built milk houses around the wind pump and the fresh, cool water is kept running through large tanks made for milk cans, enabling them to furnish their own tables with choice cream and butter and an overplus that in many cases pays for the family groceries.

The Girls of Limerick.

If asked "Where are the prettiest girls in the world?" I will immediately reply, in Limerick, Ireland. There is a freshness of face, lustrousness of eyes, healthfulness of color and complexion about the Limerick girls, en masse, that carry off the sweepstakes trophy. The girls of Cork and of the lakes—in fact, of the country all the way down from Dublin—are somewhat of the Limerick order. In form they constitute a happy medium between the rotund English maids across one channel and the slyph-like Parisian demoiselles beyond the other. But the Limerick face is the perfection of female beauty—a human ceramic without a blemish. The Limerick girl is also the highest example of exquisite wit and ingenuously—an extraordinary assimilation, to be sure. In other words, while she is not insensible of her sparkle of words she seems like one who has never looked frequently into a mirror. She has regular and sometimes very pretty teeth, and if her nose is often inclined to retrouse and there is an "Irish expression of mouth," these but add piquancy to her other beautiful features.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Dark Conspiracy.

"Only one thing I ask, darling," she whispered. "What is it, my own sweet?" he replied. "Let our engagement be a secret for another month." "Why? No, let me tell the world you are mine. Let me show them the prize I have won." "Not for a month, dearest—one, one little month, I beg of you." "Why do you want to keep it a secret? I fear you do not love me." "I adore you. You are the only man I ever loved. But you are poor—and—and—" "But I will be rich. With you, love, I will work for wealth." "Yes, darling, yes. But Harry is wealthy, George is well off, William has plenty and several of my admirers have money." "Still thinking of your admirers?" "Yes, dear, for my birthday is near, and they have all given me handsome presents on previous occasions." "Thoughtful angel, forgive me. Let us wait a month."—Chicago Journal.

Bad Bank Management.

It looks like a funny piece of bank management all around when an officer of a bank is allowed to overdraw his accounts for nearly one million dollars, as was the case of the City Savings bank in Detroit. What safety is there left for depositors when such a state of affairs is possible? Previous to Monday morning of last week, no bank in the city of Detroit was thought to have been more solvent. Any other bank, so far as the public was able to judge, was just as liable to close its doors. What are cashiers, bookkeepers, directors and officers of banks for if not to look out for just such mismanagement as this. In all probability the depositors will in this case be provided for but there was nothing to have hindered Andrews from converting everything into cash and sailing for Europe, had he been so inclined, weeks ago.

Andrews Appointed by the Council.

And Andrews is the sweet scented individual to sign those commission as superintendent of police of Detroit. Gov. Bliss got out of bed in the middle of the night—Lapeer County Press. And the Lapeer County Press is the paper that maliciously stoops to tell the above. In the first place the bill making a one-man police commissioner for the city of Detroit was a special act by itself, and the act vested the power of appointment wholly with the common council of Detroit. Not only that, but the bill was not signed by the governor until several days after its passage and against his signing the bill there was not a single protest filed from that city. After the bill had been signed the council of the city of Detroit by a vote of 29 to 3 appointed Mr. Andrews police commissioner.

The appointment of Rep. S. J. Colby on the Board of estimators for the city of Detroit is a wise selection.

Mr. Colby is not only a man of good judgment but his integrity is in every way above reproach. He was one of the most influential members of the last legislature and was always alert for the interests of the people. Because of his resemblance both in action and appearance to the martyred president he was frequently spoken of as Detroit's Abe Lincoln.

It's funny that a man like Gen. Joe Wheeler should live eighty odd years to make an ass of himself on the floor of the U. S. senate as he did last week.

The only wonder was that Andrews didn't steal the board of directors too.

Evidently Senator Joe Wheeler knows there are no breweries in old Kentuck.

Synonym for Patriotism

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... CIVILIZED nations of earth without exception employ the name of Washington as synonym for the sublimate expression of unselfish patriotism and ardent love of liberty.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... Besides, there were cabals formed by rival commanders who sought his place, the incompetence of congress, the treason of Arnold, the opposition of Tories, and a general discontent, the result of a long war.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... In the midst of these trials Washington moved with serene front. In that dread winter at Valley Forge, when nearly one-half of his army was barefoot and had to sleep under ground, he preserved his courage. No general who has lived overcame so many obstacles as Washington.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... Count D'Estang said there was not another man in the world who could have held together that army at Valley Forge, ragged, as it was, and hungry and houseless and unaided.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... At no time in the seven years did Washington doubt of final victory. With sublime faith in the justice of the cause, he waited and trusted and planned. He would accept no defeat. Compelled again and again to decline battle because of the paucity of his numbers and the limited supply of ammunition, he persisted in his purpose until he wore out the enemy. More than once, by the sheer force of his genius, he snatched victory from defeat.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... All of South America and very much of North America were under the domination of despotic Spain, whose edicts were written in blood and whose greatest kindness was death by the sword. France was groaning under the burden of a hideous oppression of aristocracy, German and Scandinavian peasants were but little removed from slavery, and the Russian bear fattened upon the labor of its wronged subjects.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... The thrall of England's oppression had been great and the fathers were resolved to get as far away as possible from any banding of the human person or human will. They made careful study of conditions among other nations and resolved to avoid these.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... In all of these high purposes Washington was foremost, lending his acute intelligence, magnificent personality and all the influence of his glorious record in the seven years' war for liberty, to the work of building a government upon the broadest grounds possible of freedom of action, of thought and of speech.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... Every nation of earth had an established religion, this nation eschewed the subject, leaving God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... Freedom of the press was denied in all other countries; this people guaranteed there should be no abridgment of this right. Other countries saw honor, distinction, fame and glory only in the accident of birth, which alone could give a king or open way for honorable distinction.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... Washington contended for universal suffrage, against class legislation and for a government of and by as well as for the people.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... The nation thus was born, and as it grew the healthful influences of its life began to spread. Where it has not revolutionized, as in France, it has tempered and refined, as in Russia, the only nation of Europe whose rule is absolute. Some form of constitutional government prevails in every land. Japan, unknown to the world 100 years ago, freely acknowledges its weighty obligations to this nation, and, in the light of recent events one would not be overbold in declaring that in the present century China will sit at the feet of the United States to learn of it.

As Such Washington's Name Has Been Accepted by the Nations of the Earth. ... Washington not only did he take leading part in the forming of a constitution for the bringing of the states together as a single nation, but also through the genius of his patience and courage in the years between Bunker Hill and Yorktown he wrested the states from the oppression of Great Britain.

His courage, his patience his supreme faith inspired faith and hope in others. He was the star of the long night of the revolution. All eyes were turned to him; all hearts were centered in him. The people doubted congress, they lost confidence in other generals, but the cause and Washington were one. It was made incarnate in him, and he died the cause died with him.

Equal to every emergency, quailing before no duty, unflinching for country rather than self, he won his way to immortal fame. He might have been dictator, or king, and could have wrested all North America from foreign dominion. He chose, rather, to become servant of the people whom he loved, and whose government he established.

After a brief administration, he declined to serve longer as their chief magistrate, returning to the life of a simple citizen of the republic.

The glory of his name lies in a rounded life. Without being luminously conspicuous in single gifts as Alexander or Napoleon, the sum of his talents eclipses the glory of the others. The luster of his fame does not dim with the years, but its brightness increases with the added, developing results of the work done by him. The name of liberty will have disappeared when the glory of the name of Washington shall have been obliterated. Being dead, he continues to speak in every added evidence of the greatness of the country of his founding.

WILLIAM ROSSER COBBE

Words of Patriotism

JUST now, when the birthday of the illustrious Washington is about to be celebrated everywhere, the following words from his farewell address, made public over a century ago, will be appropriate.

"Be united—Be Americans. The name which belongs to you, in your national capacity, must exalt the just pride of patriotism more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. Let there be no sectionalism, no north, south, east or west, you are all dependent one on another, and should be one in union. Beware of attacks, open or covert, on the constitution. Beware of the baneful effects of party spirit and of the ruin to which its extremes must lead. Do not encourage party spirit; but use every effort, to mitigate and assuage it. Keep the departments of government separate, promote education, cherish the public credit, avoid debt. Observe justice and good faith toward all nations, have neither passionate hatreds nor passionate attachments to any, and be independent politically of all. In one word, be a nation, be Americans, and be true to yourselves."

Cherry Tree Pickings

True story of Washington. It is believed that the true story of George Washington and the chopped-down cherry tree is as follows:

Father—Did you chop down that cherry tree, George? George—Yes, father, it was I. "And for why, my son?" "Didn't I hear you say only last week that the tree was only an expense to you, sir?"

"You may have, my hopeful." "Well, father, I was only trying to cut down your expenses."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Suspicion. "You know George Washington said he could not tell an untruth." "Nonsense," answered the practical politician, "that was probably a campaign slander, invented to make his party managers think he was a hard man to handle."—Washington Star.

He Was Tempted. "Pa, is it true that George Washington never told a lie?" "I guess so. That's what they say, anyway." "Then nobody could ever get ast him what salary he got, could they?"—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE TAILOR CLOTHIER.

The "Monday night" club gives a dancing party in the rink tonight. John Pinkerton sends home from Duluth a picture of a load of logs which was drawn by one team of horses and which when re-loaded at the railroad station filled five flat cars. The load scaled 21,900 feet.

The Record is quite willing to give free of charge one good notice of any social or entertainment to be held but where additional advertising is desired we must ask that the regular advertising rate be paid.

Some evil disposed persons stole Zeke Dingman's gray horse and cutter from in front of Parson's store Wednesday night and skipped in the direction of Plymouth. Officers are now on track of the thieves.

John Thompson's big farm house just west of town came near going up in smoke Tuesday. The fire caught from the chimney, but by some tall hustling Byron J won the battle and only $25 damage resulted. No insurance.

A number of water main taps about the village are frozen between the mains and the houses causing some inconveniences. One or two hydrants are also out of business from the same cause—not being put down deep enough.

The post-office department contemplates the issuing of an order to rural delivery agents to reverse the order of their route every alternate day, starting out first one way and the other, thus giving all the patrons an equal show for the early delivery.

Northville horsemen went over to Plymouth last Saturday and rather turned the tables on the fast ones there, winning three out of four races. The winners from here were Harley Johnson's "Dr. J.", Ed. Starkweather's "Josie D." and Frank Rhodes' "Dyke".

Dr. H. H. Hollace, a well known veterinary surgeon and a former resident for some time of Northville, died at his home in West Hancock, in the upper peninsula, February 8. His wife was Marcia Hullett of Novi and she with one daughter survive him. Dr. Hollace was 60 years of age.

Roy Starkweather until recently located at Kansas City in the dining car service of the Santa Fe railroad company has been promoted by being transferred to New Mexico where he will have charge of one of the company's big hotels. Roy is a bright hustling young man and Northville people will rejoice to hear of his continued success.

Did you ever notice how often honesty has to be bought? Look through the "Lost and Found" columns of any paper and one will see so many rewards offered for the return of lost articles. It is rather shoddy honesty that demands more than the expenses of returning lost property to its owner. In fact its downright dishonesty for the finder of lost property to keep it after he knows the owner and then demand pay for returning it.

The Methodist's supper and entertainment in the rink Wednesday night was a decided success and netted the society about $20 which is to apply on the pastor's back salary. The supper was a nice one and the entertainment was enjoyable. The selections by the orchestra under Will Barley's leadership the solos by Messrs. Maser and Buchner, the readings by Messrs. McDonnell and the songs by the quartette were very nice and highly appreciated.

The Orion Review says "Drayton Plains will soon be with Northville in the production of fish." Why bless your soul the whole village of Drayton Plains and the new hatchery as well could be put inside the Northville institution and then there would be room enough left in the basement into which to chuck Pontiac's present county building. The Northville station will produce more fish in a year than Drayton Plains will dream of in a life time.

The master of an elementary school sent a circular to the parents of some of the pupils under his charge, stating that judicious corporal punishment often had a beneficial effect on backward boys, and asking if they would approve of such a course when he considered it necessary. The following is one of the replies he got: "Der sir i have reserved ur flogging stickler and u hav My sunksken too walup my sun Jhon ass much ass u hlk i no Jhon is a very lad skolar his spaleng is simply atrosches i hav tried to tech him Mysilk but he wil not lern nothing so i hop u wil bet it into him is much ass u kan. Urs truley—"P. S. the resin Jhon is sich a bad skolar is bekas he is My sun by My wifs first husband."

Robert Yerkes says many people have a wrong idea about the visit of the proverbial ground hog on Feb 2. "In fact" Mr Yerkes says "its a bear instead of a ground hog and he comes out at exactly 10:00 o'clock a. m., and this year the sun did not shine at that hour and we may therefore look for an early spring."

A hundred things happen every day that a newspaper man never sees. He does the best he can, keeps his eyes and ears open, but he is only a human being, neither omniscient nor omnipresent. You often wonder and perhaps you say the newspaper has favorites, and it has remarks an exchange. They are people who are thoughtful and send what news they have to the newspaper. Water Works Supt Whitehead desues all those who have water taps frozen to report to him at once that proper credits may be given.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Simmons Wednesday evening at a shadow social given for the benefit of school district No. 9 of Novi. About seventy five were present and nearly eight dollars was raised.

Says the Argo Mills.

To the farmers who have been so patient with us while trying to do their work and at the same time put in the necessary repairs in our feed department, we wish through the columns of this paper to express our thanks and to add that we have increased our capacity so that in the future we will be able to take care of them with little or no delay. Thanking them again for their kind favors in the past and earnestly soliciting their patronage in the future, we are yours respectfully,

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

In "The Great White Diamond" which comes to the Whitney Opera House for a week's engagement beginning Feb 23, there are four big acts and as many big sensations.

The "Swing for Life" and the "Human Mail Bag" scenes are by far the most thrilling ever seen on the local or metropolitan stage.

The management has been very liberal in staging the play and one of the finest mountings possible has been given it. Matinees will be given on every day except Wednesday.

Lyceum Theatre—Detroit.

The little ones, as well as their elders, will receive with expressions of delight the announcement that the Hanlons are to produce a new version of "Superba" on Feb. 23rd at the Lyceum Theatre.

The stage has the facilities for properly staging the Hanlon's clever production, and its dimensions enable them to make efforts out of the ordinary, those that they would not attempt elsewhere. Consequently a brilliant and adequate presentation can fairly be expected under the circumstances.

Seats are now on sale for any performance. The engagement is for one week with Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

NEW CABINET PLACE.

It Will Be Called Department of Commerce and Labor.

President Washington's Official Family Had Four Members, President Roosevelt's Will Soon Have Nine.

The passage by the senate of the bill to create a department of commerce and labor, with its need to be a member of the cabinet, is interesting as a historical development, as well as a sociological fact. Only four officials—a secretary of state, a secretary of the treasury, a secretary of war and an attorney general sat at the council table of President Washington.

The head of the war department at that time had charge of the political end of the navy, as well as of the army. A department of the navy, however, was created in 1775, during John Adams' administration, at a time that was seemed to be imminent with France on account of that country's assaults on American commerce and outrageous treatment of American ministers.

CARROLL D. WRIGHT (Mentioned for the New Portfolio of Commerce and Labor) importance of the agricultural interests a department to concern itself with the great activities was created in 1859, near the end of Cleveland's first term, and Norman J. Colman of Missouri, was its first head.

The growth of the cabinet positions from four places in Washington's days to eight for the past dozen years, and the ninth place post is likely to be established before the present session of congress ends is merely a formal recognition of the expansion of the number and importance of the country's interests. Twelve as many persons are in the cabinet in Roosevelt's time as were there in the days of the country's first president, but the United States is about 20 times as large as it was then, and it has a hundred times the wealth and a hundred times the business that it had at that time.

The $700,000,000 of merchandise exported in 1900, a 100 per cent larger than when Washington first entered office—has grown to not far from $1,500,000,000 in 1900 and in 1901 while the domestic trade had expanded in a far larger degree. The increase step by step in the number of members of the president's official family in the past hundred years never tells the story of the great expansion which has been made in the country's interests and activities.

Seven Common Dreams.

Horace G. Hurdson's classification of the more frequent dreams, in his recently published volume on "Dreams and Their Meanings," is fairly complete. He says there are seven common kinds: (1) the falling dream—you are falling over a precipice or down the stairs; (2) the flying dream—the dream that you can fly; (3) the dream of more or less inadequate clothing—that you are not properly clothed; (4) the dream of not being able to get away from some beast, or injurious person or thing, that is pursuing you; (5) the dream of being drawn irresistibly to some dangerous place, such as a fire; (6) the dream that some darling wish has been gratified; and (7) the dream of being about to go on a journey, and being unable to get your things into your trunks, etc. But, as he adds, "no doubt there are a great many more."

Smokes Through His Ears.

In one respect John Watson, of Canton, O., is a wonder. While boxing with a friend he received a staggering blow on the left ear. A few days later, while smoking, he discovered that he could make smoke come from that ear. The doctors believe that a fracture of the tympanum is the cause.

Fright Turns Mule's Hair.

The flood at Mifflin City, Pa., so terrified a black mule that the animal turned gray with fright. He was employed in the Mifflin millinery.

The Bulgarian Army.

The Bulgarian army is composed of thirty thousand men, well drilled equipped in the German style, and organized by Russian officers upon the Russian system. Every man between the ages of twenty and twenty-four years is obliged to do military duty for five years, although Mussulmans may excuse service by the payment of a special tax.

A Night Alarm.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the busy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst cases of croup. Mrs. P. L. Gordon of Manassas, Ky., writes: "My three-year old girl had a severe case of croup. The doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life." Refuse substitutes. Murdock Bros.

Their Love Eternally Buried.

Before the Empress Frederick's coffin was finally closed all the love letters she received from her late husband, the Emperor Frederick, together with his last written messages inscribed after he had lost his power of speech—were placed in the coffin over her heart.

Saved Him From Torture.

There is no more agonizing, irritable than piles. The constant itching and burning make life intolerable. No position is comfortable. The torture is increasing. DeWitt's Witch Hazel cures piles at once. For skin diseases, cuts, burns, bruises all kinds of wounds it is unequalled. J. S. Galloway St. Paul, Ark., says: "From 1875 I suffered with the protruding, bleeding piles and could find nothing to help me until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." Beware of counterfeits. Murdock Bros.

The Drawback to Originality.

"Why do you keep repeating quotations?" asked the irritable man. "Why don't you say something original?" "My dear sir, there is no use of that. Every time I think of anything good enough to be original I find that somebody said it years ago."—Washington Star

It's a mistake to imagine that itching piles can't be cured; a mistake to suffer a day longer than you can help. Doan's Ointment brings instant relief and permanent cure. At any drug store, 50c.

It Wasn't Smallpox.

One of the colored porters Hannibal and St. Joe who remained in Kansas City because smallpox was telling his evil tale to some acquaintances "Dey done kept me sequestered for three weeks and it wasn't smallpox at all. It was miffin but celluloid."

The Sky Looks Bluer.

The sky looks bluer, the sun shines brighter, a feeling of youth and strength creeps over the soul after taking Rocky Mountain Tea made by the Madison Medicine Co. 5c. Murdock Bros.

Great Project in Manitoba.

The promoters of the scheme to develop the water power at Lac du Bonnet, Manitoba are considering the project of building an electric railway from the city of Winnipeg to that place at a cost of about $1,000,000.

Saved Her Child's Life.

In three weeks our child's little boy was changed by pneumonia almost to a skeleton. Write W. Williams of 145 East 6th St., a terrible cough set in that in spite of a good doctor's treatment for several weeks grew worse every day. We then used King's New Discovery for Consumption and our darling was soon sound and well. We are sure this grand medicine saved his life. Millions know it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and lung diseases. Geo. C. Hueston guarantees satisfaction. 50c $1.00 Trial bottles free.

The Musical Voice.

The Vocal Physiologist says: "More money is thrown away on the education of the human voice than on the support of the government. Of every 10,000 voices one may be listened to without pain, of every 100,000 voices one may be listened to with patience, of every 1,000,000 voices one may be listened to with satisfaction, of every 10,000,000 voices one may be listened to with sensations of joy."

The Last Heard of It.

My little boy took the croup one night and soon grew so bad you could hear him breathe all over the house," says F. D. Reynolds, Mansfield, O. "We feared he would die, but a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure quickly relieved him and he was to sleep. That's the last we heard of the croup. Now isn't a cough cure like that valuable?" One Minute Cough Cure is absolutely safe and acts immediately. For coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis and all other throat and lung troubles it is a certain cure. Very pleasant to take. The little ones like it. Murdock Bros.

First Cotton-Spinning Machine.

The first machine for the manufacture of cotton was invented in 1786. It was designed to card, rove and spin the raw cotton into thread.

E. W. Grove's signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets. The remedy that cures a cold in one day.

Who Pays the Printer?

When you go around from printer to printer getting bids on a job and then giving it to the lowest bidder, you get an indifferently good job—one with no particularly good points—one that sells no goods for you, then who pays the printer? YOU DO. When you pick out a good printer, giving him all your work, educating him to an idea of your needs, and paying a fair price for the work you get, your printed matter (when secured at the Record Printery) necessarily creates a favorable impression for you and for what you offer, and becomes a factor in selling your goods. Then who pays the printer? Your customer. HE DOES.

EXPROSIS.
CHAPTER I.—The story of the Lost Continent is the translation of an ancient manuscript found in a cave in the Canary Islands and opens with the installation of Batho as viceroy of Quatan, a province of Atlantis, the latter a continent situated in the Atlantic ocean. Batho succeeds Deucalion, who is recalled by the queen Phoenice, to help prop the tottering throne. Phoenice, of whom he has heard little, is a young girl, and she claims to be a daughter of the gods. She is adopted and raised by Zaemon, governor of a province, and one of the high priests. She is possessed of a great ambition to rule and while Zaemon deposes him. All attempts to capture her are unsuccessful until she finally defeats the old king and takes the throne.

CHAPTER II.—Batho is much surprised when next day Deucalion asks the queen a ship to take him home, believing he had grown rich during his reign, as he (Batho) would have done, but Deucalion is a poor man, having ruled only the good of the country. Things are different in Atlantis, greed and selfishness being the universal law.

CHAPTER III.—When near home they are halted by enemies of Phoenice, who demand the custody of Deucalion. Batho, the captain, refuses, and a fierce fight ensues, in which he is severely wounded.

CHAPTER IV.—Deucalion upon his arrival is met with much pomp and ceremony by Phoenice. Although women have had no influence over him, he readily recognizes her powerful influence over others, and the fact that he does not immediately fall in love with her evidently piques her. Deucalion notices the grandeur of the city also the poverty, squalor and starvation, and he learns that it is partly the result of a siege in which the city has been for some time subjected.

CHAPTER V.—Deucalion is taken to the palace and a magnificent feast is spread in his honor. While they are eating, a fall of man passes the guards and approaches the queen, declaring that she must undo the evil she has caused. Feud is stirred up between the queen and the emperor, Zaemon, her old guardian. This talk nettles Phoenice and she angrily orders him away. He refuses, and launches a curse that she will be overthrown by the high gods whom she has sinned against. She faces him in a tumult of orders and orders the guards to have him whipped before her. He warns them not to touch him and when one of them does he falls to the floor, struck by a deadly stroke, with a fatal leprosy. Zaemon then silently leaves.

CHAPTER VI.—The same evening Deucalion decides to investigate the siege. He goes to one of the gates of the city and there he meets a certain number of men and the populace by throwing prisoners to two huge tigers in the circus between the city walls. After his arrival a girl is stripped, is placed in the circus, but with the help of Deucalion she escapes. She tells him that her name is Nais and that he was recalled to become the husband of Phoenice.

CHAPTER VII.—While seeking robes for her in the captain's chambers the floor suddenly opens and Deucalion is seized and bound. He later learns that the besiegers had tunneled under the walls and had a certain number of men and the populace by throwing prisoners to two huge tigers in the circus between the city walls. He is taken to a small, abandoned temple, where Nais, who is the daughter of Zaemon, is waiting for him. She says that she has faith in him and will help him escape and return to the city as soon as darkness and a mutual love having sprung up between them.

CHAPTER VIII.—When night comes and they are waiting to go the blowing of horns announces the arrival of some one. It is Zaemon, and he addresses the people and Deucalion listens and the latter is observed by Zaemon. Zaemon tells him that he is the only hope for the city, for the saving of Atlantis and that he must return to the city and become husband of Phoenice, for the sake of the people. He agrees to return and Zaemon then leads him to a secret entrance to the city.

CHAPTER IX.—Inside the city he notices everyone hurrying to the great stone circle of the Lost Continent. He follows and there witnesses the arrival of the queen, a small horse is placed on the altar as a sacrifice and the queen speaks to her people, telling them of her wonderful birth, and calls upon her high father, the Sun to acknowledge her by sending down fire to light the offering. Immediately a flash of lightning lights the woodpile and priest and the people proclaim her a goddess. Deucalion, standing among the people, witnesses this.

Petuitantly she drew her hand away from mine. "Oh, your conditions, and your Atlantis! You carry a crudeness in these colonial manners of yours, Deucalion, that falls on one after the first blunt favor has worn away. Am I to do all the wooing? Is there no little thrill of love under all your ice?"

"In truth, I do not know what love may be. I have had little enough speech with women all these busy years."

"We were a pair, then, when you landed, though I have heard sighs and prostrations from every man that carries a beard in all Atlantis. Some of them tickled my fancy for the day, but none of them have moved me deeper. No, I also have not learned what this love may be from my own personal feelings. But, sir, I think that you will teach me soon, if you go on with your coldness."

"From what I have seen, love is for the poor and the weak, and for those of flighty emotions."

"Then I would that another woman were empress, and that I were some ill-dressed creature of the gutter that a strong man could pick up by force and carry away to his home for sheer passion. Ah! How I could revel in it! How I could respond if he caught my whim!" She laughed. "But I should lead him a sad life of it if my liking were not so strong as his."

"We are as we are made, and we cannot change our inward which move us."

She looked at me with a sullen glance. "If I do not change yours, my Deucalion, there will be more trouble brewed for this poor Atlantis that you set such store upon. There will be ill doings in this coming household of ours if my love grows for you, and yours remains still unborn."

I believe she would have had me fondle her there in the golden castle on the mammoth's shaggy back, before the city streets packed with curious people. She had little enough appetite for privacy at any time. But for the life of me I could not do it. The gods know I was earnest enough about my task, and they know also how it repelled me. But I was a true priest that day, and I had put away all personal liking to carry out the commands which the council had decreed upon me. If I had known how to dup-

There was no guiding the mate; in its insanity of madness it doubled many times upon its course, the windings of the streets confusing it. But by degrees we left the large palaces and pyramids behind, and got among the quarters of artisans, where weavers and smiths gaped at us from their doors as we thundered past. And then we came upon the merchants' quarters where men live over their storehouses that do traffic with the people over seas, and then down an open space there glittered before us a mirror of water.

"Now here," thought I, "this mad beast will come to sudden stop, and as like as not will swerve round sharply and charge back again towards the heart of the city." And I braced myself to withstand the shock, and took fresh grip upon the woman who lay against my breast. But with louder screams and wilder trumpeting the mammoth held straight on, and presently came to the harbor's edge, and sent the spray sparkling in sheets among the sunshines, as it went with its clumsy gait into the water.

But at this point the pace was very quickly slackened. The great sewers, which science devised for the health of the city in the old king's time, vomit their drainings into this part of the harbor, and the solid matter which they carry is quickly deposited as an impalpable sludge. Into this the huge beast began to sink deeper and deeper before it could halt in its rush, and when with frightened bellows it had come to a stop, it was bogged irremediably. Madly it struggled, wildly it screamed and trumpeted. The harbor water and the slime were churned into one stinking compost, and the golden castle in which we clung lurched so wildly that we were torn from it and shot far away into the water.

Still there, of course, we were safe, and I was pleased enough to be rid of the bumpings.

Phoenice laughed as she swam. "You handle yourself like a sore man, Deucalion. I owe you something for lending me the cushion of your body. By my face! There's more of the gallant about you when it comes to the test than one would guess to hear you talk. How did you like the ride, sir? I warrant it came to you as a new experience."

"I'd prefer have walked."

"Fish, man! you'll never be a courtier. You should have sworn that with me in your arms you could have wished the bumping had gone on forever. Ho, the boat there! Hold your arrows! Deucalion, I'll tell you those fools in that boat. Tell them that, if they hurt so much as a hair of my mammoth, I'll kill them all by torture. He'll exhaust himself directly, and when his flurry's done we'll leave him where he is, to consider his evil ways for a day or so, and then haul him out with windlasses, and 'tame him afresh. Pho! I could not feel myself to be Phoenice if I had no fine, red, shaggy mammoth to take me out for my rides."

The boat was a ten-slave galley, which was churning up from the farther side of the harbor as hard as well-plied whips could make oars drive her: but at the sound of my shouts the soldiers on her foredeck stopped their arrow-shots, and the steersman swerved her off on a new course to pick us up. Till then we had been swimming leisurely across an angle of the harbor, so as to avoid landing where the sewers outpoured; but we stopped now, treading the water, and were helped over the side by most respectful hands.

The galley belonged to the captain of the port, a mincing figure of a mariner, whose highest appetite in life was to lick the feet of the great; and he began to fawn and prostrate himself at once, and to wish that his eyes had been blinded before he saw the empress in such deadly peril.

But it seemed she could be cloyed with flattery. "If you are tired of your eyes," said she, "let me tell you that you have gone the way to have them plucked out from their sockets. Kill my mammoth, would you, because he has shown himself a trifle frolicsome? You and your sort want more education, my man. I shall have to teach you that port-captains and such small creatures are very easy to come by, and very small value when got, but that my mammoth is mine—mine, do you understand?—the property of Goddess Phoenice, and as such is sacred."

The port captain abased himself before her. "I am an ignorant fellow," said he, "and heaven was robbed of its brightest ornament when Phoenice came down to Atlantis. But if reparation is permitted me, I have two prisoners in the cabin of the boat here who shall be sacrificed to the mammoth forthwith. Doubtless it would please him to make sport with them, and spill out the last lees of his rage upon their bodies."

"Prisoners you've got, have you? How tak'n?"

"Under cover of last night they were trying to pass in between the two forts which guard the harbor mouth. But the boat found the chain, and by the light of the torches the sentries sped in. They were caught with ropes and put in a dungeon. There is an order not to abuse prisoners before they have been brought before a judgment."

"It was my order. Did these prisoners offer to buy their lives with news?"

"The man has not spoken. Indeed, I think he got his death wound in being-taker. The woman fought like a cat also, so they said in the fort, but she was caught without hurt. She says she has got nothing that would be of use to tell. She says she has tired of living like a savage outside the city, and moreover that, inside, there is a man for whose nearness she craves—most mightily."

"Tut!" said Phoenice. "Is this a romance we have swum to? You see what affectionate creatures we women are, Deucalion. The galley was brought up against the royal quay and made fast to its golden rings. I handed the empress ashore, but she turned again and faced the boat, her garments still yielding up a slender drip of water. 'Produce your woman prisoner, master captain, and let us see whether she is a runaway wife, or a lovesick girl mad after her sweetheart. Then I will deliver judgment on her, and as like as not will surprise you all with my clemency. I am in a mood for tender romance to-day.'

The port captain went into the little hutch of a cabin with a white face. It was plain that Phoenice's pleasantries scared him. "The man appears to be dead, your majesty. I see that his wounds—"

"Bring out the woman, you fool. I asked for her. Keep your carriage where it is."

I saw the fellow stoop for his knife to cut a lashing, and presently who should he bring out to the daylight but the girl I had saved from the cave tigers in the circus, and who had so strangely drawn me to her during the hours that we had spent afterwards in companionship. It was clear, too, that the empress recognized her also. Indeed, she made no secret about the matter, addressing her by name and mockingly making inquiries about the meagreness of the rebels, and the success of the prisoner's amours.

"This good port captain tells me that you made a most valiant attempt to return, Nais, and for an excuse you told that it was your love for some man in the city here which drew you. Come now, we are willing to overlook much of your faults if you will give us a reasonable chance. Point me out your man, and if he is a proper fellow I will see that he weds you honestly. Yes, I will do more for you, Nais, since this day brings me to a husband. Seeing that all your estate is confiscated as a penalty for your late rebellion, I will charge myself with your dowry and give it back to you. So come, name me the man."

The girl looked at her with a sullen brow. "I spoke a lie," she said; "there is no man."

I tried myself to give her advocacy. "The lady doubtless spoke what came to her lips. When a woman is in the grip of a rude soldiery, any excuse which can save her for the moment must serve. For myself, I should think it like enough that she would confess to having come back to her old allegiance, if she were asked."

"Sir," said the empress, "keep your peace. Any interest you may show in this matter will go far to offend me. You have spoken of Nais in your narrative before, and although your tongue was shrewd and you did not say much, I am a woman and I could read between the lines. Now regard, my rebel, I have no wish to be unduly hard upon you, though once you were my fan-girl, and so your running away to these ill-kempt malcontents, who beat their heads against my city walls, is all the more naughty. But you must meet me half-way. You must give an excuse for a leniency. Point me out the man you would wed, and he shall be your husband to-morrow."

"There is no man."

"Then name me one at random. Why, my pretty Nais, not ten months ago there were a score who would have leaped at the chance of having you for a wife. Drop your coyness, girl, and name me one of those. I warrant you that I will be your ambassador and will put the matter to him with such delicacy that he will not make you blush by refusal."

The prisoner moistened her lips. "I am a maiden, and I have a maiden's modesty. I will die as you choose, but I will not do this indecency."

"Well, I am a maiden, too, and though because I am empress also, questions of state have to stand before questions of my private modesty, and I can have a sympathy for yours—although in truth I did not obtrude unduly when you were my fan-girl. Nais, no, come to think of it, you liked a tender glance and a pretty phrase as well as any when you were fan-girl. You have grown wild and shy among these savage rebels, but I will not punish you for that."
