He's convinced
he's Santa Claus.
So why doubt it?

The Real St. Nick

Directed by Penelope Spheeris (Wayne's World) and starring Torrey Devitto (Vampire Diaries) and Callard Harris (Dallas)

As a psychiatrist, Kate prides herself on being rational and immune from superstition. So when a young man in a Santa costume injures himself while saving her from a falling boulder, Kate takes him to her hospital. To the psychiatric ward, that is. Where people convinced they are Santa or Napoleon are brought in for treatment. He's sweet-natured, good-looking, and awfully sure that he's Santa. The patients are fine with that: they love him, and his Christmas spirit soon starts to spread to the staff as well. Even Kate is "infected." Who is he? Is he delusional? Should they release him? After all, it's only a few days before Christmas and if – let's just pretend – he really is Santa, he's got loads of work ahead of him... What annoys Kate the most is that she's falling in love with him, a patient – or is he really the spirit of Santa Claus?
