

Figure 11. Gentian on Enderby Island, Auckland Islands, flowering profusely now there are no browsing animals. samples of the Auckland Islands gentians were collected for genetic analysis, to help solve the riddle of whether there is one species that has two modes, or two distinct species.

Figure 12, The Snares, ancestral home of Olearia lyallii, considered by some (but not by me) to be a weed on the Auckland Islands.
