

FUNNZ Foray Report for 2014

Jerry Cooper 26th July 2014

Statistics

- 884 records added to the FUNNZ database (799 on the 2013 Foray)
- The FUNNZ database now contains 10082 records
- The 884 records represent 345 taxa identified to species (321 species on the 2013 Foray)
- 401 specimens were added to the PDD national collection (312 on the 2013 foray).

Sites with most collections

- Cobb Valley 175 collections
- Totaranui 165 collections

Assessment using DOC criteria for conservation status

The conservation status of New Zealand fungi remains under review. A number of forayers visited Fringed Hill to search for Claustula fischeri which is known from just two sites in New Zealand and 'Nationally Critical' by any definition. Unfortunately we did not find it.

Taxa not previously recorded in New Zealand

Hymenopellis mundroola

Cortinarius lilacinus

Both these species were recorded at Milnethorpe Park in association with Eucalyptus and both records require confirmation. Cortinarius lilacinus is native to the eastern USA so the presence in New Zealand with introduced Eucalyptus would be a jump in distribution. There are a number of Australian indigenous lilac/lavendar coloured Cortinarius associated with Eucalyptus including C. archeri, C. lavendulensis, C. lavendocaeruleus, and C. tasmacamphoratus. The Milnethorpe Park collection is none of these either. The same species may have been recorded from Australia as C. alboviolaceous but that record is unlikely.

As usual we did find a number of undescribed species, especially hypogeous species.

Jerry's Notes on Selected Collections:

This area of New Zealand always produces interesting records and seems to have a rich fungal diversity. In this respect the fungal diversity mirrors the known patterns of plant diversity in New Zealand. Some taxa seem to be restricted to this region, and southern North Island, for example Phylloporus. There is a suspicious overlap between some of these geographically restricted mycorrhizal species, and the concentration of Nothofagus truncata.

Totaranui was particularly rich in species of Clavarioid fungi and Amanita species, although there were multiple collections of relatively few distinct taxa.

Below are a few of the interesting finds that crossed my desk.

Cyptotrama sp. 'Waipoua (PDD72864)'

This undescribed species of Cyptotrama is genetically and morphologically distinct from C. asprata and has been collected a number of times.

Descolea maculata or D. aff. recedens?

Until recently only three species of Descolea were known from New Zealand: D. majestatica (slimy cap), D. phlebophora (wrinkled dry cap) and D. gunni (pointed scales at stem base). Some collections historically recorded as D. gunnii do not have the pointed scales at the stem base but have blunt scales, or no scales/fibres at all. Some of those collections are identical to D. maculata described from Western Australia and others are close to D. recedens. Sequence sampling confirms the presence of D. maculata and indicates NZ material of D. recedens is a different species to that in Australia. In addition, sequences also tell us we also have D. antarctica (slimy capped, smaller than D. majestatica) but the relationship between D. majestatica and the existing sequenced material labelled D. antarctica requires research.

Hymenopellis mundroola

A 2-spored species with pilocystidia but without hairs. Described from Australia.

Lichenomphalia sp. (white)

New Zealand species of Lichenomphalia are a problem. The literature indicates we have L. alpina and L. umbellifera. In fact neither species is likely to be present. These species are almost certainly restricted to the northern hemisphere. Our 'L. alpina' is most probably the same as L. chromacea from Australia. It is hard to say what historical records of L. umbellifera mean and preserved collections are in a poor state. Recent well documented collections suggest we have at least three undescribed species of pale coloured and undescribed species of Lichenomphalia, of which this is one, from the Cobb Ridge track. The base of the stem in this species is a pale lilac colour, like the northern hemisphere L. hudsoniana. Lichenomphalia is a genus of lichenised mushrooms and the algal partner thallus can be seen in this photograph. In L. alpina the thallus is referred to 'Botrydina' and forms globe balls. In the Cobb Ridge collection the thallus balls are squashed flat, but perhaps not sufficiently for it to be called squamulose like 'Coriscium' applied to the partner of L. hudsoniana and L. lobata. However the thallus in the Cobb Ridge species is very similar to that for the recently described yellow L. tasmanica from - you guessed it - Tasmania. The Cobb Ridge species was growing in moss cushions on exposed soil. The common 'L. alpina' inhabits alpine sphagnum bogs and often grows together with another pale cream/yellow species currently tagged as L. 'Lewis Pass' which also has a Botrydina algal partner.

Rhodocollybia sp. 'McCleans Island (PDD87681)'

2014/0325

This small pure white agaric is quite common across New Zealand in various habitats. It produces masses of white hyphae binding the well-rotted woody or litter substrate. Close up it has a frosty appearance and often with small water drops. The presence of occasional partially dextrinoid spores, especially on the cap surface, points to the genus Rhodocollybia, which is confirmed by sequence data. There is a strong possibility this species was named by Greta Stevenson as Lentinus delicatus. This was moved into Marasmius by Horak who subsequently decided it was perhaps closer to Resinomyцена. The frosted appearance of the fruitbodies of 'McClellan's Island' are suggestive of that genus.

Pseudobaeospora sp. 'Kaihoka Lakes'

2014/0730

I think of Pseudobaeospora as a tentative genus identification when all else has failed to key out. The same is true of Callistosporium. New Zealand has undescribed species in both genera, and in fact there is something recognisable about our species, even if you can't quite put your finger on it. Certainly the strong colours of the fruitbodies are distinctive. From a phylogenetic perspective both genera appear to form a cluster of odd things isolated in the dark inter-galactic void somewhere between Entoloma and Tricholoma. This reddish species of Pseudobaeospora, with a yellow stem base and apparently coloured latex, has been collected before by Egon Horak and Michael Wallace, but it is clearly not common.
