Candidates, Money Issues, Bylaw Changes Major Topics at GHI Annual Meeting 9 Candidates Vie For GHI Board Seats

A total of nine candidates are running for the four positions on the nine-member Greenbelt Homes, Inc. Board of Directors. The winning candidates will serve for a period of two years. GHI's annual meeting and election will be on Monday, June 30, at 8 p.m. in the Greenbelt Center School auditorium and continue Tuesday from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. for voting.

Two incumbents, Virginia Moryadas and James Foster, are seeking re-election. Moryadas and Foster are seeking their fourth terms on the board, both having served since 1974. Foster has also served as board treasurer for that period. Two board members, James W. Smith and Norman Weyel, chose not to seek re-election. Both Smith and Weyel were first elected to the board in 1965; Smith served as board president from 1972-1978 and Weyel was board secretary from 1970-72 and 1976-78.

Seeking their first term on the board are Ray McCawley and Joe Jenkins, currently on the Audit Committee, Donald Ehre, See GHI CANDIDATES, p. 3

In addition to the reports of officers, directors and elected committee members, the GHI annual membership meeting on Monday, June 30 will include a presentation of the candidates, the election of members to the Nominations and Elections Committee, and voting on agenda items.

Increase in Charges
1. Authorization to increase monthly charges 5% for the last six months of 1980. This increase represents a 2.5% increase if spaced out over the entire year; however, it is proposed that the increase be in effect from July to December to recoup part of the deficit which occurred in prior years, primarily as a result of the high fuel costs and increased interest rates on capital improvements loans. All members will pay 5% regardless of whether they live in a one-bedroom unit or a three-bedroom with an addition. The amount to be recouped this year is $99,611. The operating deficit from 1979 is $176,948 which will be made up over the next several years rather than all at once.

Revenue Bond Costs
2. Authorization to borrow money for revenue bond issuance costs and required reserves for rehabilitation program. At the May 28 meeting, the membership approved the completion of the rehabilitation program using funds raised through tax-exempt city revenue bonds. The Greenbelt City Council has made a preliminary commitment to issue revenue bonds up to $17,500,000 for GHI's rehabilitation program. This includes the so-called indirect costs to cover their preparation and sale which were not specifically approved by the membership. Such costs are fees for bond counsel, underwriters, See GHI AGENDA, page 3

FLASH

This afternoon, at 2:30 p.m. in County Executive Lawrence Hogan's office, the long-awaited Dept. of Housing and Urban Development rehabilitation loan for Greenbelt Homes, Inc. was signed. This loan will provide GHI with $6.4 million at 3% interest and is the largest loan of its kind that HUD has awarded. Details on the signing will follow in next week's News Review.

Council Votes $2,766,275 Budget for 1980-81

by Mary Lou Williamson
With one dissenting voice heard from time-to-time during the evening of June 4, Greenbelt's city council approved by 4 to 1 a $2,766,275 budget for fiscal 1980-81 for a 9.1 percent increase over last year. Property owners whose taxes will make up 43 percent of the budget, will pay $1.04 per hundred dollars assessed valuation, a 7c increase.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld called the budget a "product of compromise." Praising the city for its major investment in the community over the years, he cited the city Recreation Department's "best in the nation" award for cities its size in 1975, and CARES' recent national recognition for its exemplary program. Greenbelt, he said, has the best services in the county and a police department second to none. Weidenfeld said he was convinced that citizens want this reputation maintained.

Councilman Richard Pilski, certain that council could have lopped off another two cents, voted against a number of items and against the budget as a whole in protest.

"How much does one cent on the tax rate mean?" asked Councilman Charles Schwan, not convinced that arguing over two cents was worth the agony. "$1.80 a year to the average Greenbelt homeowner," he answered his own question.

Expenditures in the new budget total $2,766,275—up $230,100 or 11.1 percent over last year's amount. Inflation in the cost of goods and services the city must purchase is the major culprit in raising the expenditure side of the budget. Little growth is allowed for next year. The few capital expenditures planned will be paid for with revenue sharing funds.

Holding down the revenue side, several factors were at work increasing the load that the homeowner must pick up. 1. A lowering of the percentage of commercial property valuation that can be assessed for taxes reduces the amount of tax dollars that the city will receive from its shopping centers, office buildings and apartment complexes. 2. County, State and federal contributions are either lower this year or are not keeping up with inflation. 3. Some revenues the city used last year to keep from raising the tax rate were one-time payments the city will not be receiving this year. The property tax, paid primarily by the homeowner, is used to balance the budget after the expenditures and other sources of revenue have been identified. In addition, Greenbelt was included in the first year of the State's new triennial reassessment plan. (See accompanying chart for examples of how the assessments were increased for homeowners and, in general, decreased for businesses, page 6.)

The budget calls for no new employees or programs, but aims to complete or continue projects begun in previous years while maintaining the current level of services. At the budget work session, City Manager Jim Giese expressed concern as to whether the city could maintain the present level. "In reviewing the budget today, when I said this budget would provide for funding at the same level, I was stretching it."

Council, in fact, could find few places in the budget that could be cut, but did manage to reduce the tax increase by two cents.

Sensing council's frustration that it could not do more, Giese and city treasurer Dennis Piendak later reviewed and recalculated, finally finding an extra cent. One error discovered produced an additional $3,500. They projected an increase in animal licensing for an added $200 and transferred to the general fund an additional $4,000 in revenue sharing funds. Other items which should further increase the revenue picture are: 1. penalty and interest on delinquent tax payments, $500; State Highway funds, $4,000; State Aid for Police protection, $1,600; County Tax rebate, $300; Special

CITIZENS AIR CABLE TV CONCERNS TO CITY COUNCIL

by Leta Mach

Although appalled by the small size of the audience for a public hearing on Cable TV June 16, one of the ten citizens who attended complimented council for holding the meeting. Mayor Gil Weidenfeld suggested the cause of the small turnout could have been apathy about cable TV, confidence in Council or the summer months.

The Greenbriar citizen who complimented council, Paul Siquibic, echoed the concerns of many present. Those citizens wondered about costs, services and options. Assistant City Manager Dennis Piendak introduced the subject by noting that cable TV companies were not originally interested in areas which had good local TV reception. However, because of new technology and services that can be offered, companies are now interested in Prince Georges County. In addition to the re-transmission of existing over-the-air channels via microwave and satellite, institutional services can now offer local programs such as Cultural Arts Center events or city council meetings. Additional services, security services like burglar and fire alarms and two-way services such as banking, shopping and working at home are also possible. "The technology is there for these types of 1984 services," explained Piendak.

"What is the city going to give the TV company?" wondered Don Shell of Greenbriar. Nothing besides the franchise or right to use the public rights-of-way was the answer. Shell also wondered whether people could afford and would use cable TV. Councilman Richard Pilski explained that statistically most subscribers come from lower-income areas. Weidenfeld felt senior citizens or young couples with children might spend their entertainment dollar on cable TV.

"I'm all in favor of it," stated Pilski. With cable, he noted, all antennas can be eliminated and there would always be a clear, steady picture. Mary Moien of Woodland Way asked whether all See CABLE TV, page 5

Cultural Center Offers Another Hit Show

by Frank H. Hirschel

Our own Greenbelt Cultural Center will follow up the successful run of "A Ticket to Broadway" with what looks like another very entertaining and enriching summer festival of four one act plays.

Judy Holland and Angela Schreiber of Greenbelt and John Lebkicher, Skip Pocock, and Janet Cripe serve as directors while the performers include three Eleanor Roosevelt High School students, Ken Holl, Kelly Holl and Angela Schreiber, Jr.

Another run of packed houses is expected, so come early. For information call 345-3916, 345-3516 or 345-9169.

Greenbelt Riders Honored At PG ARC Ceremony

Greenbelt's Ride-A-Bike for the Retarded, co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Department and the Greenbelt Parents of the Retarded, was awarded the McDonald's Achievement Trophy by the Prince Georges County Association for Retarded Citizens (PGARC) for its outstanding record of participation and collections for the 1980 county-wide Ride-A-Bike for the Retarded held in May. Over $4,000 in pledges was recorded that day from the 105 riders, with ten family groups represented. This top route award was donated by McDonald's Restaurants.

JoAnn Rowe, Recreation Assistant, and Eileen Labukas, Parent Coordinator of the Greenbelt Route, accepted the trophy on behalf of Greenbelt at the Awards Ceremony held in the ballroom of the Andrews Air Force Base Sports Center by the PGARC.

Also honored at the Awards Ceremony were the Greenbelt City Council and the Weir family of Adelphi for group participation; Greenbelters Jon Piper, Steve Feeny and Steve King for highest collections; 100 mile riders Jon Piper, Mike Derdeyn, T. J. Karch and Tom Stutzman, all of Greenbelt, and Joel Gallum of Lanham; 75 mile rider Tim Holtz of Hyattsville; 50 milers David Moran and Jay O'Hagan of Greenbelt and Marc Villard of Lanham; and Alex Basili of Lanham and Ben Clarke of Greenbelt for most miles for elementary school age. Similar recognition was given to the top riders on the other five county routes.

He will enter the University of Maryland this fall and major in Computer Science.

Clarifying the Issue

To the Editor:

Richard Ley asserted in his letters that depreciation accounted for the reduction in tax revenues from apartment and commercial sources. This was not the case. As was pointed out several times in his presence, lower tax revenues resulted when the state reduced the assessable base of such property from 50 to 46.8% of true value.

The first year of the phase-in of taxation of the Greenway Shopping Center will be the fiscal year that begins July 1, 1981. As Mr. Ley contends, "It is fair to expect a developing shopping center to reduce... property taxes" of other taxpayers. It is not fair to expect this result before the taxation phase-in period begins.

city legal counsel, rating agency, market studies, etc., totalling approximately $700,000. In addition, an interest bearing reserve account must be established in the amount of about $1.8 million. This is a requirement for issuing the bonds and would only be used if GHI were to default on revenue bond payments. This account should not be an expense to GHI members.

Amberg Proposal

3. Member petition to amend Article VIII, Section 11 of the Bylaws. This section of the Bylaws deals with financial regulations which apply to "Expenditure of Funds and Contracts." Ten members signed this petition which was presented by Mat Amberg to the board for consideration at the annual meeting. This petition proposes a change in the manner in which GHI's budget is developed. Currently, monthly charges are increased when GHI's operating expenses increase. The effect of the petition would be to remove new member-approved programs costing more than $250,000 or discontinued programs, e.g., oil heating and hot water from operating expenses and include these costs as an addition to the operating expenses.

The effect could be to increase monthly charges above 10% without membership approval when large-scale new programs are begun or to decrease monthly charges below 10% when similar programs are discontinued because the cost of such programs are removed from operating payments.

Second Bylaw Proposal

4. Ad Hoc Bylaws Committee Report. In response to the membership directive at the 1979 annual meeting, the Bylaws Committee considered and has proposed a change in the method of electing members to the Nominations and Elections Committee. Instead of electing members to this committee during the annual meeting, the proposal is to file for the N & E Committee 10 days before the election, advertise the names of those interested in being on the committee, and provide for an additional three days for more nominations and written acceptances. Candidates' names will then be placed on the ballot to be elected in the same manner as candidates for the Board and Audit Committee. Biographies will appear in the News Review in the last issue prior to the election.

Cable TV Sparks Citizen Questions

the channels would be on-going channels. Piendak said that all channels would be used with the 35 channel systems that have already been proposed by the companies that have appeared before council. Pilski explained that the greatest number of channels would be auxiliary services.

Another question was whether all the TV companies would have the same channels. Pilski felt companies would probably bring channels from their home base such as Atlanta or New York. Weidenfeld added that though some of the channels would be different, some would be the same such as Home Box Office. Council felt the channels which were carried would be negotiable.

Citizen Darwin Beck was skeptical. It's "probably selling the citizens of Greenbelt something they won't get delivered to them in the near future," he feared. He asked about the possibilities for local programming. Pilski felt college students could use cable TV for a training ground and produce local programs. Further, he said, major networks could "trade-off" any local film-clips that were not needed to the cable TV company.

Options

Piendak again listed Greenbelt's choices if it should decide in favor of cable TV. Greenbelt can join the county system, franchise a joint agreement with interested adjoining municipalities, grant a city franchise to a private company or franchise the city to build and operate a system itself. Recently, the Cable TV Information Service, consultant to the county system, has expressed the view that municipalities should join the county system when it seeks proposals because the service areas have to be set by that time. Joining with other cities would have the benefit of being able to support "Cadillac services rather than Toyota or Volkswagon services," added Piendak.

Piendak further noted that about 15-20 cities in the country operate their own cable TV system. Sinqubic wondered "how a city the size of Greenbelt could support such a system?" That option would require much research responded Piendak. The "novel option" is "possible, but not very probable," he concluded. Weidenfeld felt "the upfront money would probably be prohibitive."

Choices

Shell expressed the opinion that the choice was between joining the county system or granting a franchise to a company. He asked for a comparison of the choices. Weidenfeld explained that by granting a franchise, the city would get all the possible revenue (3% of subscriber fees), total control of access channels, and some involvement in the system. However, in joining the county, the city would only get a share of the revenue after administrative costs were deducted, and would have to share the public access channels. Pilski felt there was no reason to join the county: "the county cannot really give us anything other than problems." A city system could not be excluded from the educational systems or library programs, he explained.

City Manager James Giese felt the difference was not very great. Because a cable company would need other cities to survive, local access channels would still have to be shared. Councilman Richard Castaldi agreed that a company would not operate in Greenbelt alone. However, he felt Greenbelt was a good prospect for cable companies. Pilski noted that Greenbelt would be very easy to wire. "Greenbelt has a lot of bargaining chips," said Castaldi.

Councilman Charles Schwan was amused. "I can't usually find one channel to watch," he explained. However, he added, "I know we're dealing with more than entertainment." Weidenfeld had begun the evening commenting that "the city council of Greenbelt believes this is a timely subject." Indeed a majority of those present were interested in having cable TV.

A Symbolic Gesture and Other Failures

by Mary Lou Williamson

Concerned by the largest proposed tax increase in more than a dozen years and a budget already pared pretty close to the bone, Councilman Richard Pilski tried hard, but failed, to persuade his colleagues at council's work session on the budget on May 28 to support a symbolic cut. Pilski called for deleting funds for members to attend the National League of Cities national convention. He emphasized that he has supported attendance in past years. But this year he urged that council forego the expense.

"I think being symbolic is very important," he said. "Council should take a very good look at its own budget. There is $2500 in ours. If we can find four more, we're talking about a one-cent reduction. One year (of not going to the national convention) isn't going to be traumatic." Pilski had no takers.

"I am sympathetic about the tight budget," responded Councilman Richard Castaldi, "but I've gained an awful lot from the League of Cities meetings. Greenbelt as a whole has gained." He spoke of the benefits of talking over problems with council members from around the country, exploring "the failures of other communities." He was proud, he said, to show others "what Greenbelt is about, the professionalism in (the city government) in Greenbelt." The value of those meetings he described as "intangible, difficult to measure."

These national meetings are the "only real training grounds for council," said Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, continuing with Castaldi's point. "It is a chance for us to advance and improve our skills and performance."

When Pilski put his recommendation in the form of a straw vote, there was no second.

Bill Feller, from the audience, rose to "speak in favor of Pilski's motion." While he could see some value in "learning something from the League," he called the trips "junkets."

Councilman Tom White was incensed. "This page GF-9 — the city's budget for manning and staffing a five member council — doesn't really tell the story." Most members of council, he said, serve on committees for the Washington Metropolitan Council of Governments, the Maryland Municipal League, and others. Noting that he actively participates on three local committees, White continued, "What's not in this budget is my time and travel expense" for this extra work. "Most of my annual leave time is spent on city business. It's never been council's policy to reimburse its members for time and expenses and travel to those local meetings." He said he has been trying to get onto the Environmental Steering Committee of the League and expects to make a trip to Minneapolis this year at his own expense to attend a committee meeting. As a council member, he said, he intends to be active in the League.

Councilman Charles Schwan summed up cryptically: "I am not interested in symbolic cuts that could do more harm than good."

Pilski's recommendations to cut travel and subsistence from other budgets for the city manager, the assistant city manager and the several department heads also failed for lack of a second.

City Manager Jim Giese spoke in defense of his staff. "Many of our department heads are very professionally oriented. It is their means of training as well. The city has long had a policy of sending its key staff to their respective professional organization's national convention and many are actively involved. Parks Superintendent Dennis Doornekamp is a past president of his.

Other Failures

Council members took turns losing a few other line item changes at the work session. The effort to obtain an air conditioner for the Springhill Lake Recreation Center passed (3 to 2), but not a burglar alarm to cut down on vandalism expenses. Weidenfeld, White and Castaldi voted no.

The $5,000 cut in police overtime was not unanimous — Schwan feared it was just a paper transaction that could not be made to materialize. Weidenfeld was also opposed to the cut. "We're already budgeting $9,000 less than we are spending this year," he said.

White's efforts to add $3,000 for a possible bond issue referendum also failed. Only Schwan supported the idea.

"If this budget has shown me anything," explained White, "a lot of expenses incurred by the city come very close to being considered capital expenditures: development of recreation facilities, ball fields, bike paths. A bond issue represents a tax savings to the citizens because the proceeds are used now for needed capital improvements, in effect, beating inflation. Spreading the cost over 10 to 15 years lessens the burden."

"At this point (the bond referendum is a maybe), I'd feel uncomfortable putting money for it into the budget," objected Weidenfeld. Pilski put it more forcefully: "If we put this money into the budget, then it is predetermined that we are going to do it."

Giese had his turn too. He wanted the $5,000 saved on police overtime to be earmarked for curb and gutter work. He explained that the public works director wanted to do extensive repair work on those areas where spring water is causing damage to curbs in Lakeside, Boxwood and Lakewood. No funds were allocated to purchase materials for this work under major maintenance. Last year $47,000 was budgeted under this item. If the curb and gutter work is to be done, the money will have to be found somewhere else.

Citizens in the audience who had come to see how the budget would be handled by council this year had their turns also. Feller wanted to know why the city collected paper separately from the rest of the trash when it cost more than the paper could be sold for. Giese explained the finances: "The city receives $7,000 per year for paper sold. But we save $3,000 in landfill dumping fees plus an undetermined amount for hauling. One fifth of the salary of trash men would be $15,000 — an expense that can be charged to paper collection. The net result," he said, "still is that it is costing us money to collect newspapers." He would find some administrative problems with how to utilize the time of the crew men on the fifth day if they were not collecting paper.

"This was a policy decision that council made several years ago," said Weidenfeld.

"The cost is well worth it," continued Schwan: "reuse of a product, trees are not cut down."

Castaldi speculated that the city could do a better job in marketing the product.

Al Herling supported council's position. "It is probably costing 25c per year per capita to help

Assessment Financing fee (Greenway), $5,000; animal shelter fees (recently increased) $300; and parking fines, $3,000.

Two items will decrease revenues: 1. Tax Credit for Elderly (thought to have lapsed), $800 and 2. Special Taxing District (Greenway), $4,300 — special agreement at time of annexation allows Greenway to begin phasing in taxes the next fiscal year.

A more significant item was the rebate expected from overpayment of landfill dumping fees paid to the county. Last year the council formally objected to the inequity of paying the same fee as unincorporated areas who receive bulky trash service not offered within municipalities. This year Prince Georges County will refund $300,000 to cities as a direct result of Greenbelt's action. While the exact amount has not yet been determined, Giese estimates that the city will receive at least $23,275 — more than enough to fund the refuse employees' cost-of-living increase and the county's $2 per ton landfill fee increase. There will be no raise in the charge to the city's trash customers this year as had been projected at the work session.

In a handful of spots, council did vote to spend more money than the manager's budget called for: 1. two more positions of sergeant in the police department, the size of its request to $8,300. New requests came from the Golden Age Club for $500 for transportation and from the Cultural Arts Center for $3,500 for lights and projection equipment. The total amount approved is an increase of $7,975 over last year.

Reserve for Capital Improvements

Five cents of the tax rate, $58,300, will go to Reserves for Capital Improvements. This money is traditionally spent on street repair and reconstruction. Council did not determine how these funds would be spent. At a later date council will determine which of the many projects identified by staff and totaling over $400,000 will be funded. At the end of the meeting council agreed with its staff to add an additional $10,000 to the budget to be financed by what they dubbed the Darth Vader Tax. Admissions taxes earned on the 18-month run of "Star Wars" at the Beltway Plaza's AMC Cinema two years ago were a bonanza to the city's treasury. Weidenfeld had just learned last week that "The Empire Strikes Back," a "Star Wars" sequel, would begin showing in Greenbelt within the month. If the film runs the entire fiscal year at higher than the normal price, Greenbelt should gain at least $10,000 in added admissions taxes.

Capital Improvement Fund

Funds for the 1969 bond issue for capital improvements have been pretty well exhausted. All that is left is interest received from $33,434, the security deposit for the elderly housing mortgage and $11,215 received from the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for the 92-inch water main right-of-way. The latter is earmarked for improvements at the Lake Park. Giese's budget for the coming fiscal year calls for spending $4,200 to complete remodeling work on the police station.

CDBG Budget

The City expects to finance four projects with Community Development Block Grant Funds: 1. Reconstruct Research Rd., $100,000; 2. Sidewalk from Green Ridge House to the Center, $15,000; 3. Hillside Road from Research to Laurel Hill, $10,000; and 4. pedestrian underpass under Hillside Road, $30,000. Some of the work may have to be paid for by the city funds or the scope of the work cut back as costs are now expected to exceed CDBG moneys available.

Other Funds

Council approved the Motor Equipment Maintenance Fund under which the city maintains its 62 vehicles and pieces of equipment. This budget has been helpful in gathering information on the various vehicles. The city hopes to be able to use this data to determine when to purchase or rent, when replacement is economically justified, and how to allocate expenses to the proper department.

Also approved was the Replacement Fund Budget. Annual contributions made from the various departments are pooled until replacement is needed. While contributions have been increased during the past two years, according to Giese, some reserves are still inadequate. A truck will be purchased this year that was scheduled for replacement two years ago. Major purchases this year will be a load-packer for trash collection, $38,000, and a new radio central transmitter-receiver with a variety of related accessories for the Police Department's communications room, $7,000. Funds will also be used to purchase a new photocopy machine, $7,000.

conserve a resource. This is not a sacrifice."

"This is a contribution Greenbelt is willing to make," said Weidenfeld. He was puzzled that the collection of newspapers is often singled out as a cost to the city. The rest of the "waste stream we get nothing for and yet we have to pick it up. Here's something we get money back on."

Feller tried again. He complimented the city on the "beautiful chess tables installed this past year on the center mall near the statue" Would the city please provide chess and checker sets? The answer was no. However, "the city is looking for an enterprising merchant who would be willing to rent such sets," said Giese.

Eunice Coxon was concerned that a Greenbelt CARES brochure implied that the organization was expanding to meet the needs of the elderly and, eventually all ages. "I really don't feel I need their help," she said. Giese responded: "CARES is only funded to work with youth." While the city was taking applications for Green Ridge House last year, Giese said he was struck by the number of elderly who have serious problems. He would like to see CARES expand in the future. "You are very fortunate," he told Coxon; "you are able to lead a full and active life." There are many who cannot, he said, and are isolated in their homes. Coxon suggested they should be referred to the county. She opposes duplication of county services by the city.

ment, $2,400 (promotions, not additional personnel); 2. more summer part-time crew members; 3. air conditioning for the Springhill Lake Club House, $1,500; and 4. equipment for a playground to replace the one lost when Green Ridge House was built, $1,500.

On the other hand, council decreased the amount of money projected for police overtime, $5,100; eliminated one full-time position from the parks crew (a trade-off for the three part-time summer positions added, at an overall saving of tax dollars), $5,000; 3. eliminated the cost of paving the new road into the city cemetery (the developers of Capital Office Park have promised the paving as a donation to the city, $200.

Council approved the manager's proposal of a 9 percent pay raise for classified personnel. When he recalculated the amount needed, Giese found he had a surplus of $3,600 over his original proposal. Council also approved a raise of $3,000 in salary for the manager. Also approved were the requests for contributions to recreation organizations. Here Councilman Richard Pilski objected to lumping all the requests together in one vote. For example, he felt the Boys and Girls Club had asked for a larger increase than was needed and that the Cultural Center amount should have been reduced. But he could only vote for or against all organization requests as a block.

Most organizations requested about the same amount as last year. However, the Boys and Girls Club had almost doubled

Present-Former Center School Students-Faculty Honor Gertrude Yeager

by Barbara Likowski

It was Gertrude Yeager's day Sunday, June 8. About 150 of her friends, co-workers, and students, past and present gathered on the lawn at Center School to give their warm and loving good wishes, and in many cases, thanks also, for all her kindnesses and support. Even the weather cooperated and the day was beautiful, sunny and pleasantly warm. After 27 years at Center, Mrs. Yeager is retiring. There were many teary eyes but many more smiles as she and her friends reminisced about past events and laughed at some antics they remembered. Throughout the afternoon, photographers were busy taking pictures.

During a short program, Mrs. Yeager was presented a proclamation by Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, John Van Schoonhoven, principal at Center, and former principals Robert Ellis and Charles Braun praised Mrs. Yeager for her dedicated service to all the children of Center School.

Students of all ages were present including third grader Michelle Gielen who was in Mrs. Yeager's class this year and her mother who was also taught by Mrs. Yeager. Also attending was school board member Lesley Kreimer.

Mrs. Yeager received a corsage from Center's teachers, as well as gifts and cards from her many friends. Refreshments were made by the school staff and they also decorated the tables with lovely baskets of flowers. The punch from the PTA, was made by Darwin and Sheri Beck and their children.

Mrs. Yeager was also honored at the Prince Georges County Teachers' dinner and by the teachers at Center at their end-of-the-year luncheon. Center staff presented her with gifts including a scrap book of photographs and drawings by all the children in the school.

One new bleacher was assembled and installed at the city park at the end of Northway. Maintenance was also done on the Springhill Lake Golf Course. The flower beds on Southway Road and in Boxwood were weeded and mulched.

The general crew worked on the new bandstand at the Lake Park. Streets were patched.

The regular trash crew has been on schedule. Special trash requests are continuing to be heavy.

Candidates, GHI Members Discuss Election Issues

by Barbara Likowski

GHI candidates' night 1980 was different from other candidates' nights held in the past few years: different in format, different in the number of those attending, different in that there was little animosity among those of opposing views. It was a most congenial evening.

Sponsored by the "Good Neighbors," the evening at the library on Monday, June 23 was planned to give people a chance to mill around and get to know one another. People wore name tags to make themselves easily identifiable and all were encouraged to seek out the candidates and talk to them. Between 40 and 50 people came out to do this—a small crowd by some standards, but a much larger one than at GHI candidates' nights in the past and judging from the constant buzzing and moving around of those present, a most successful evening.

Not wanting to break the rapport of those present by attempting a panel discussion, acting chairman Bill Feller nevertheless stopped the talking at one point to ask the candidates running for the board and audit committee to tell briefly ("in a minute and a half") why they were running. Eight of the 9 candidates running for the 4 places on the board and 2 of the 4 running for the 3 places on the audit committee were present.

Running independently for the board, Donald Ehre, a registered engineer, feels that with his educational background he can help GHI at this time. He holds a B.S. in Civil Engineering and an M.S. in Business Administration. Ehre, who has designed several storm drainage systems, feels that since GHI will be needing to write air tight specifications during rehabilitation, he can "function as a review." He sees himself adding a viewpoint that may be lacking at this time.

Tom McAndrew, another independent, stated his main concern as "the future of GHI." He feels his 25 years in business give him sufficient expertise in the corporate structure.

Independent Ray McCawley, a member of the audit committee, sees a need for a change. One problem, he stated, is the lack of communication with members. There are rumors and facts, he said, and the members often cannot tell which are which. McCawley feels the board has trouble with implementation.

Incumbents James Foster and Virginia Moryadas stand on their records. Foster, treasurer of GHI, said that he is a fiscal conservative. He asked people to vote for him if they liked what he had done in the past. Moryadas was not present.

Only one complete slate is running—Steve Curtis, Della Donaldson, Joe Jenkins, and John Lewis. Their goals are similar. Curtis, chairman of the long-range planning and ad hoc electric heat conversion committees, speaking first, identified their goals as strengthening committees, better long-range planning, and better accounting. He feels GHI cannot have some of the uncertainties "it had in the past" and "will try to put the house in order." He is for having management inspect all work that is done.

Donaldson stated she had decided to stop complaining and get involved. She would like to see if it is possible to do something about things. She was a member of the ad hoc investigative committee and has an electric test home. Donaldson would like to see members clean up yards and the community.

Jenkins, a member of the audit committee and chairman of the ad hoc investigative committee, feels the current board has "not been watching our money as it should have" and that some of it has "gone through the cracks." He cited waste in overbuying and shoddy workmanship as examples. He favors computerized accounting.

Lewis, chairman of the engineering and maintenance committee, also has an electric test home. He advocates contracting out the maintenance on the new electric heating system. As the workload increases or decreases, GHI can have more or less staff as needed, he said.

This reporter discussed the subject of contracting out maintenance with several candidates and could not find anyone who wanted to contract out structural maintenance. According to Curtis, the membership would have three options: 1) contract out heating maintenance and have each member pay for his own maintenance, 2) contract out and have the members contact GHI as usual and divide the charges among all, and 3) pay a fixed monthly fee (either by contract or under the present system). McCawley also expressed the opinion that the membership would have to choose.

Carl Conrad, who is running for audit committee, feels that his 25 years as general supervisor of large contract jobs and 7 years as a P.G. County building inspector qualify him for the job. He has worked on the engineering and maintenance committee and feels he can be a lot of help to the board, management, and audit committee.

Katherine Keene, former member of the board and nominations and elections committee, is running for the audit committee. She promised to represent the membership itself and see to it that the board does what is delegated to it and not more than is delegated. She felt there is a fine line between being a "snoop" who might harm employee morale and not being concerned enough.

Jim Simon and Frank Gervasi were out of town.

Because the gathering was going so well, the nominations and

Western Rezoning Hearing Postponed

The hearing on three rezoning applications for the 45 plus acre tract behind the Greenway Shopping Center has been postponed at the request of the property's contract purchasers Western Development Corporation and owners Cameron-Brown. The applications, scheduled for presentation before the Zoning Hearing Examiners on June 25, have been remanded to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC) while Western amends them.

Western had requested a rezoning change from high density-high rise apartments (R-10) for most of the land to commercial miscellaneous (C-M) for the entire tract. Reportedly, the petitions will be amended to include a mixture of C-M, commercial office (C-O), and residential (east of Hanover Parkway) zoning as recommended by the MNCPPC Technical staff.

After the applications are amended, they will be given to the city council for review. A hearing date before the Zoning Hearing Examiner has not yet been rescheduled.

Anderson Petition Will Be At Center on Saturday

Petitions will be available at the Greenbelt Shopping Center Saturday morning from 10 to 12 to place presidential candidate John Anderson on the ballot in Maryland in November.

Over 55,000 signatures will be required and even then the matter may require a court decision because a preliminary filing deadline in April was missed. Anderson had not declared his candidacy at that time.

Anyone wishing to volunteer for this effort should call Margaret Hogensen at 345-7323.

elections committee which had scheduled a drawing for places on ballot at GHI agreed to come to the library and hold the drawing there. Order of names on the ballot will be: 1) Lewis, 2) McAndrew, 3) Donaldson, 4) Ehre, 5) Jenkins, 6) McCawley, 7) Moryadas, 8) Curtis, and 9) Foster. Audit Committee order will be: 1) Conrad, 2) Gervasi, 3) Keene, and 4) Simon. The order will be reversed in the list of biographies appearing in the News Review.

Refreshments were served by "Good Neighbors" Gary and Ruth Myers, Dott Wingfield, and Evelyn and William Feller.

for GHI Board of Directors
GHI Meeting June 30 and July 1

For the past two years I have been deeply involved in the workings of GHI. I live here and want to continue living here. I have attended most board meetings and squeezed in as many committee meetings as I could. For six months I worked for GHI, conducting rehabilitation related surveys. I've been in all the crawl spaces and know about those problems. I also know of the problems with management, budgeting, government regulations and member relations. GHI is a co-op fighting a non-co-op world. Through co-operation we can survive.

GHI NOTES

Frame members should receive a rehabilitation questionnaire on window and siding choices by this week-end. Any member who does not receive the questionnaire by Monday should contact the Manager's Office, 474-5566, and another one will be mailed. The questionnaire must be returned to GHI no later than Monday, July 7. Anyone who does not return the questionnaire will receive the insulation, windows and siding that are part of the basic rehabilitation program.

The last meeting of the 1979-80 Board of Directors will be on Thurs. June 26, at 8 p.m. It will be the last meeting for board of directors Jim Smith and Norm Weyel who did not choose to run for re-election this year.

Members are reminded of the annual meeting on Monday, June 30, 8 p.m. at Greenbelt Center School auditorium. (See ad and story elsewhere in this issue on topics to be discussed at the meeting).

Members who would like a free container of roach powder may pick one up from Sandra Barnes, Coordinator of Member Services, at the GHI Building. For most effective treatment for roaches, the powder should be used in conjunction with regular services of the exterminator. For those who are allergic to the spray used by the exterminator, the powder can be used instead.
